ADT announces acquiring commercial security and fire systems firm, Alliant Integrators

Published on 10 Feb 2020

ADT continues growing its geographic footprint and strengthening its capacity to serve mid-market, national and large-scale commercial customers with the announcement that it has purchased Alliant Integrators, based in Louisville, KY.

Security and fire safety experts

Established in 2006 by Beverly and Jim Bozarth, Alliant Integrators, Inc., is a provider of commercial fire alarm detection, installation, inspection and maintenance services in the Kentucky and Southern Indiana region.

The following quotes were given by high level representatives from the company regarding this corporate engagement.
Integrated fire, life safety and security systems

“A wide range of commercial clients in education, healthcare and at industrial facilities trust Alliant’s team of talented and tenured professionals for their integrated fire, life safety and security systems requirements. Alliant is a significant and welcome addition to ADT and will deepen our ability to be the one ideal integrator in the Kentucky and Southern Indiana areas,” said Dan Bresingham, Executive Vice President, ADT.

“We see a very bright future by combining the backing of a national, commercial integrator with our local and regional knowledge and technical expertise. Becoming part of the exciting organization that is ADT is a logical next step for our company, team members and customers,” said Jim Bozarth, President, Alliant Integrators.
The Benefits Of An Integrated Security System

Today, the world is connected like never before. Your watch is connected to your phone, which is connected to your tablet and so on. As we&r...